

Andrew Wilson-Dickson is a composer, pianist and conductor (as well as author, teacher and string-player). During his four years at Cambridge University he studied piano with John Lill and then the organ at York University with Nicholas Danby and Francis Jackson, at the same time holding the post of organ scholar at York Minster. At York University he was one of the first students there to study for a D Phil in Composition, his main teacher being David Blake.

Andrew's compositions have been played (and broadcast) by many well-known artists such as Peter Lawson, Andrew Ball, Julian Jacobson (piano), Nancy Ruffer (flute), John Wallace (trumpet), Susanne Stanzeleit, Madeleine Mitchell (violin), (piano) Kevin Bowyer (organ), and by ensembles such as Lontano, the Wallace Collection and the Medici String Quartet (who played his string quartet commissioned by the BBC). He has written several operas and musicals. He won the Bournemouth-Parry International Festival composition prize in 2004 with a piece (Psalm 29) which toured Australia sung by the Sydney Chamber Choir. He is particularly interested in writing for early instruments, exemplified by commissions from Fretwork and Charivari Agréable, followed by a concerto grosso and concertos for baroque flute, harpsichord and recorder. A significant part of his output is music for Christian Church worship: more than 30 congregational psalm-settings, many hymn-tunes, cantatas and instrumental pieces based on liturgical melodies.

In 1984 Andrew came to Wales to work at the Royal Welsh College of Music and Drama where he has since sustained a busy career as teacher, player and composer. The RWCMD made him an Honorary Fellow in 2005. He now freelances, playing piano and continuo harpsichord for concerts all over the UK and abroad, including festivals in Buxton, Tudeley, Swansea, Lower Machen, the Gower, at the Edinburgh Festival Fringe and the York Late Music Festival. In association with the mezzo-soprano Buddug Verona James, Andrew has been musical director for her one-woman shows Castradiva (with over 50 performances) and A Knife at the Opera, which have toured throughout the UK and the Irish Republic.

Some years ago Andrew founded Early Music Wales, an organisation to encourage early music activity in the Principality. Part of this is the Welsh Baroque Orchestra, a professional ensemble of period instruments which he directs and which has won funding from the Welsh Assembly and from the Arts Council of Wales. As well as its busy programme of concerts around Wales, the orchestra has performed at the Varazdin Baroque Evenings in northern Croatia. Andrew also conducts the Welsh Camerata, a choir specialising in baroque and renaissance music.

Andrew is also an author: his 'Story of Christian Music' is a product of his deep involvement for many years in church music. It has sold worldwide, in a dozen European and Far Eastern languages.
